An active brain, sparkling wit, a cheerful mind, a bright eye, a robust body, pure rich blood and a vigorous bounding circulation, add many charms to female society-yet, ah! how few ladies can boast of all these signs of health! While they remain victims the young ladies of Ironton on the good judg to those terrible female complaints, they will ment they have shown in this matter, and be compelled to be mere feble, delicate drones upon so clety. CITY-TAXES .- The time for City Tax-paying is at hand and the collector desires us to notify everybody of the fact. Our old friend, T. B. Lowe, Esq., of Des Arc, called in and gave us a shake last Mon-.day. He went to "Ole Virginny" last spring and remained until July. His trip was for the purpose of seeing old friends and acquaintances, as well as to recruit his health at one of the life-giving springs for which the Old Commonwealth is celebrated. He returned "feeling young as a boy," and able to do as big a day's work as anybody. He looks exceedingly well, and we trust if he makes another visit to his old home it will not be on account of failing health. May he live long and prosper. We publish the following from the Friend, published at St. Joe Lead Mines, as Judge Johnson has many acquaintances in this spending the summer with Col. White's county: "The foot race last Sunday between ramily, at the hotel. Judge Johnson, weight 343 pounds, and Mr. Wm. Goodel, weight 2991/4 pounds, resulted in victory for Goodel. The distance was 500 yards uphill. A start of twenty feet was accorded to the Judge on account of his superior weight. As the racers came down the home-stretch everyone thought the heavy man would win, but Bill' threw off his vest as he ran, and his legs went so fast they reminded one of the paddlewheels of a steamboat, and the Judge's extra 42% pounds pounds told on him and he lost sout 3 inches: 'Bill' noticed this and held his distance, allowing the Judge to gain a halfinch on him, and when they crossed the line Goodel was just 21/4 inches ahead."

Last Friday morning, as Miss Nellie Prince of Arcadia, was coming over to Ironton walking on the railroad track, she was struck by the engine of an approaching train, (No. 19). She was walking on the embankment just south of the bridge, where it was inconvenient to leave the track, and thinking she could reach the bridge before the coming train, she walked quickly ahead Perceiving at last her inability to do so, Miss Prince stepped off the track, but not entirely out of reach of the engine, which struck her in the side and threw her down the embankment. The grade just there is heavy, and the long train could not stop until it arrived at Areadia, whence the pusher was dispatched at once to the place of the accident. Miss Prince was found lying where she had fallen, almost insensible, and was taken to Arcadia. and a physician summoned immediately. At first it was feared the injuries might prove fatal, but at this writing the patient is convalescing and will probably be all right in a week oritwo. Editor Charleston Courier-"Nearly all the Ironton girls cuew wax." The above sentence is quoted from an article written by one of your charleston gents, descriptive of our little valley and its inhabitants; and, as an "Ironton girl," I take the responsi-bility u; on mysel; to deay the charge. I think the gentleman did not take into consideration the fearful risk he was running when he made the assertion or he would have looked before he leaped; for here, where girls are so much in the majority, I shoul! think it would be dan-gerous for "one man" to assert that which he Diep-At Ironton, Mo., of consumption, cannot prove. Instead of abusing us he should have had pity on us ; our forlars damsels, and spoken a good word for us; something that vould have been an inducement for a few un-warv gallants to come to our quiet little villa ... Everything in the valle comes in for a "puff" but us poor girls; all that is worthy of notice about us is, that we "chew wax;" an accom-plishment that the Charles on girls know nothing about—Oh. no! I really think that for his safety your city had better send a guard after him and escort him home; for, if times are as he says, that "seven women will lay hold of one man," I should judge it would be unsafe for him to stay here, and if we hear any more about "wax che wing," we may, although heretolore we have been very peac-ful "lay hold" of him but not as a "marriageable young man KILLED .-- Last Thursday Herman Kaum-holtz, a workman in one of the tunnels on where young men are so scarce, we girls believe in "Woman's Rights," inasmuch as we do not allow any foreign elements, "marriage able young men," to come into our community over him, without warning, crushing his body and us justiy accuse us of such an enormous sin as chewing wax without rising up on masse and denving the charge; and if that does not silence the stranger, why we can see no other way than that the "seven women" will have to drive the "one man" out of town.

Therefore, beware! "An Ironton Girl." Of course, Bro. Pollard makes the proper amende. We knew he would, for he intends coming back next summer to rest and refresh himself, while the watermelons and the festive swamp-chills are ripening. Here is his

In another column will be found an interesting communication from an Iron on girl. We are now happy to state that very few, it any, of the young ladies of Ironton chew wax. On the contrary they eschew it entirely. We entire town, when reference is made in the Courier to a habit more honored in the breach than the observance, prompily and willingly abandon it. The wax business has suffered a sunden and permanent decline at Ironton, and although we are informed that the demand for extent that at least one merchant had to order a new stock, the girls are bravely "tapering off," and wax chewing is rapidly becoming a lost art. With the consciousness of having done so much good, we shall go on with new glories in their firmness.
